

Dear FCC:

I am writing to express my opposition to the proposal that Low Power FM stations be allowed to take priority over current FM translator services.

One station that my family listens to is “KLOVE”. This station is of great service to me as a resident of the local community. It offers clean, inspirational music 24 hours a day without any risk of foul language or off-color subject matter. It is the only station that my entire family, including small children, can listen to. It also promotes Judeo-Christian values which this country was built upon. It also serves as a venue for public service announcements regarding local concerts and other events. If this station were pre-empted by a Low Power FM station, the local community here in southeast Denver would suffer because we would lose a common bond shared by many people.

The service provided by KLOVE is more valuable than that provided by any other radio station because it gives people hope in a world that doesn't offer much hope. KLOVE unites people not only in the local community but nationwide by broadcasting a message that is universal to people sharing a common faith and set of morals and values.

Thank You.
